

Romaine, Red Leaf & Green Leaf Lettuce

FOR FOODSERVICE

This trio of lettuce each has their own unique attributes but all are menu staples in most foodservice operations. Their flavor profiles range from mild (Green Leaf) to slightly sweet (Red Leaf) to somewhat bitter and nutty (Romaine). Lettuce may be the star of salads and sandwiches but it is also used in a variety of other applications; heartier Romaine can even be grilled. Although the Salinas Valley of California is one of the largest production areas for lettuce, it is grown in multiple areas leading to year round availability.

Selecting Lettuce

Look for fresh, bright green leaves that are dry, free from wilt and discoloration. Depending on the variety, the leaves should be medium to dark green or red-tinged.

Storage & Handling

For maximum shelf life and freshness, store leaf lettuces in 34-36 degree F refrigeration. Keep leaf lettuces away from drafts to prevent dehydration. Store leaf lettuces away from ethylene- producing fruits and ripening rooms. Follow good rotation practices; first shipments received should be used or displayed first.
